

Uniforms

When the Americans arrived at Sculthorpe in 1949 the USAF (United States Air Force) had been formed out of the wartime Army Airforce. At that time the uniforms were still army style, now and again one would see a solitary blue uniform but the changeover took some time.

With the arrival of the 47th Bombardment Wing the changeover had been completed although those on ground based duties still had army style dress until later when disruptive pattern material was available.

The US Army remained in the UK until 1957 some operating out of Sculthorpe

After this army style uniforms were not seen.
